white insignia of a revolutionary rap group

- Black jeans
- Black and White Air Forces
- Height: 5'7"
- Skin: Dark Brown
- Eyes: Black
- Hair: White
- Build: Slim Athletic
- Birthmark: Flamethrower-shaped birthmark, running from his wrist to up his forearm
- He often walks around with his hands in his pockets and wears a menacing scowl.
- A gentle punk. At school, he has a brooding attitude and yearns for someone to pick a fight with him. At home, he is a kind and gentle older brother and son. He takes on a more depressing persona with his mother, and even though they fight over his behavior in school, he still remains respectful.
- He loves fighting bullies, even if it involves getting jumped or losing.

- Warren is his friendly rival. Warren is a quiet student. After school, Jean saw Warren was about to get jumped behind the school. Jean often saw Warren as weak, allowing the other students to pick on him. But Jean witnesses Warren fight three other students by himself. Jean is astonished, and Warren walks away without a word. When Jean confronts Warren at school, he asks, "Why allow yourself to be picked on?" Warren's answer is, "Because everyone has hardships. The ones that act out the most are often the ones suffering the most."
- Warren reminds Jean of his father, even upholding his moral code.
- The Crows are a street gang that constantly tries to recruit Jean into their ranks. They fight from time to time, but there is mutual respect between Jean and the gang.
- The Raiders are a rival gang of The Crows. They are harsh and use dirty tactics to fight.
